Intersectionality: How Can We Address Multiple Identities and Biases at Once?

Dr. Catherine Ashcraft, Senior Research Scientist, NCWIT
Dr. Brenda J. Allen, Vice Chancellor for Diversity & Inclusion, University of Colorado
What do you already know, or what have you heard?
GOALS FOR TODAY

✓ Understand what intersectionality means & why it matters

✓ Develop an “intersectional lens” you can use to improve D & I efforts
SPOILER ALERT

✓ Brain expanding sessions
✓ No quick and easy answers
✓ Benefit of a “lens”: Practical but not formulaic
WHY AN INTERSECTIONAL LENS MATTERS

It can improve…

☑ The way we frame, talk or think about different D & I approaches (e.g., women’s leadership development, male allies, ERGs)

☑ The strategic implementation and effectiveness of these approaches

☑ Leadership and professional development in general (not just “D & I efforts” or efforts involving underrepresented groups)
Statements & Situations: Sound Familiar? What might be of concern here?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Statements</th>
<th>Situations</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>We need more women because they just have a different communication and leadership style. They’re more collaborative and nurturing.</td>
<td>So, tell me, what are the top 5 things we need to do to recruit and retain more Black women?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We really needed more diversity on this committee – and it’s so great, as a queer Latina you count for two categories!</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Your company announces a goal to increase “female leadership” and as part of this effort wants to implement a “women’s leadership development” program.</td>
<td>Your company announces plans to start a “male allies” program</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A senior leader announces that the women’s ERG should lead the charge in developing an inclusion strategy</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
WHAT IS INTERSECTIONALITY

✓ Useful metaphor
✓ Origin: gender & race
✓ Overlapping identities
✓ Relevant to all of us
✓ Bias, privilege, benefits
SOME POTENTIAL PITFALLS TO AVOID

Remember: It’s a “lens,” not a program
✓ Don’t let it become the next new buzzword/fad
✓ Don’t treat it like it’s “separate” from other D & I efforts

Don’t “dilute” it
✓ Don’t lose focus on power and privilege
✓ Don’t slide into “look at all we have in common, let’s live happily ever after....”
How to Apply an Intersectional Lens
APPLYING AN INTERSECTIONAL LENS

✔ To Data Collection

✔ To the Language or Terminology We Use
APPLYING AN INTERSECTIONAL LENS

✓ To challenge “prescription” thinking:
   What are the top 3 things we need to do to help women succeed here? To help black employees? To help LGBTQ folks succeed?

✓ To challenge tokenism and essentialism:
   We’re excited that you can bring a ________ (woman’s, Latina’s, African American’s) perspective to the discussion.
APPLYING AN INTERSECTIONAL LENS

✓ To think more strategically about when, why and how to use different D & I approaches

✓ To help think on multiple tracks at once: Segmented & Intersectional Approaches
APPLYING AN INTERSECTIONAL LENS

✓ All approaches have pros & cons
✓ There is no one size fits all or no right answer
✓ That’s why multiple tracks are important
LET’S TRY APPLYING THE LENS
WHAT MIGHT BE OF CONCERN HERE?

What could be done to make these statements/situations more intersectional? Feel free to create your own statement or situation!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Statements</th>
<th>Situations</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>We need more women because they just have a different communication and leadership style. They’re more collaborative and nurturing.</td>
<td>So, tell me, what are the top 5 things we need to do to recruit and retain more Black women?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Your company announces a goal to increase “female leadership” and as part of this effort wants to implement a “women’s leadership development” program.</td>
<td>Your company announces plans to start a “male allies” program</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ncwit.org
Reflections & Application to the Change Model
REFLECTIONS AND APPLICATION

When might you be an ally? When might you need an ally?

Do we want to call these “male” ally or “majority group” ally initiatives?

If the former, how do we frame it and what complementary efforts should we think about?
Are women’s leadership programs really what we need? If so, how will we attend to a diverse range of women?

Might we incorporate inclusive leadership into all development programs instead?
KEY TAKEAWAYS

✓ It’s A Lens, Not a Separate Program: ALWAYS ask, “Which women? Which men?”

✓ Diversity is beneficial but not predictable: NEVER expect difference to play out in predetermined ways

✓ Work on multiple tracks at once: Strategically plan to use a balance of “targeted” and more “intersectional” approaches

...AND explain these points as part of your rationale.
What now?
Thought-provoking Breakouts:

- Are Alphas Impeding Innovation in Your Organization?
- Intersectionality: How Can We Address Multiple Biases and Identities at Once?
- Are you Missing the Mark When You Benchmark?
- It Takes a Village: Do You Have One?
- Does Your Company Have a Technical Culture, and Does It Impede or Improve Your Diversity Efforts?

Break: 3:30 - 3:45pm
(Arizona & Tucson Ballroom Foyers)